

Poster preparation guidelines

Authors accepted for a poster presentation are kindly asked to prepare two materials:

1. Revised abstract

Please prepare the revised version of your abstract using the attached conference abstract template. As with all accepted contributions, the abstract should incorporate the changes and suggestions indicated in the reviews where relevant. The final abstract should follow the structure and formatting provided in the template and should not exceed 500 words.

2. Poster for the conference

Please prepare and bring your poster in A1 format for presentation during the conference.

There is no fixed poster template or predefined visual layout. Authors are free to design their posters according to the needs of their contribution. However, we kindly ask you to make sure that the poster is clear, readable, and suitable for presentation in a conference setting.

We recommend that the poster includes:

- title of the contribution;
- author name(s) and affiliation(s);
- short introduction or research context;
- research question, objective, or main topic;
- methods, workflow, data, or case study description;
- key results, findings, or expected outcomes;
- relevance to the FAIR 3D Heritage conference themes;
- images, diagrams, screenshots, or workflows where helpful;
- acknowledgements, credits, licences, and references where relevant.

Please make sure that all visual materials are of sufficient quality for printing and that any images, 3D model views, screenshots, or diagrams are properly credited if required. The poster should be readable from a reasonable viewing distance, so we recommend avoiding overly dense text and using sufficiently large font sizes.

The poster should be printed and brought to Mainz by the authors. Posters should be displayed on the first day of the conference, before the start of the official programme, in the exhibition area on the ground floor of the LUX Pavilion and remain available for viewing during the event. Practical instructions regarding the mounting of posters will be provided at the registration desk, where participants will also be able to collect their conference badges.
